To the PRINTER.

SIR,

THERE ſeems to be a general ſuſpenſion of hoſtilities for the preſent among all your political correſpondents: They prudently wait till a declaration from authority ſhall diſſipate the clouds that have been brewing for ten days paſt, and diſcover clearly whom they are to defend, and whom to attack. Like Ajax, they only pray for ſun-ſhine to diſtinguiſh Greeks from Trojans; and before they take up the ſignature of Pitt or Alfred, to know what name to tag to it, or whether it is ſafeſt to call themſelves Anti G—lle or Anti P—t.

For my part I hate ſuſpence; and having experienced myſelf the general approbation of that maxim, when a man is going down hill, down with him, I thought the ſafeſt way for me would be to give my old friends a ſhove. With this view, as ſoon as I learned for certain, that the great man was come to town, I ſallied forth in queſt of ſcandal againſt a ſet of miniſters, from whom nobody had any thing now to expect, and for whom of courſe I concluded, nobody cared a farthing.

There is a noted coffee-houſe, with an eaſtern name, not an hundred miles from St. James's, where politicians meet in ſcores: There I imagined I ſhould hear all their faults expoſed, and, by a long reaſoning upon cauſes and effects find their adminiſtration detected, as weak, pernicious, and unpopular. I was therefore not a little diſappointed to find theſe ſages together employed in filling up the places with new comers-in, without ſaying a word againſt thoſe that were to go out. 'Pray, Sir, ſays I to an elderly gentleman, that was ſtirring his coffee on the 'ſame bench, what ſum is it imagined the M——s 'of R——m has made by the ſale of offices, and 'what reverſion has he ſecured to his ſon?' Sir, replied he, there is not the ſmalleſt ſurmiſe that ever one office has been ſold under this adminiſtration; and as to reverſion it has been an unalterable rule with them never to grant any. But I don't ſee much merit in all this; for the nobleman you have juſt mentioned is neither debauched nor indigent, nor has he got a ſon. 'Well, but (continued I) they 'have carried all their meaſures through with vio'lence, and have tunnel every body out of place, 'penſion, or employment, who dared to vote 'againſt them.' On the contrary (ſay old Squaretoes) they have let too many ſtay in.' Some of their chief oppoſers laſt ſeſſion held offices both lucrative and honourable, and even immediately under adminiſtration; but as to that, they could not well do otherwiſe; for C——y is a reclaimed trooper, and was puſhed off his horſe for a wrong vote in p——t, of which uſage he complained too much himſelf ever to purſue it with regard to others. 'But then their 'boaſted chancellor of the Exchequer, what can 'you ſay for him? Did not he take the duty off cy'der to eaſe his own county, and then laid a heavy 'tax on windows to oppreſs the whole country 'round.' The exciſe on cyder he certainly did take off, but then he continued a duty, which, by his own confeſſion, will bring in more to the treaſury; and though he declaimed againſt exciſe when out, it don't ſay much for his miniſterial talents to clip its wings when in. Exciſe is a gooſe that lays many a golden egg, and the exchequer is the neſt the drops them in. Then, as to the window tax, it is not true that he laid a new one; he, on the contrary, propoſed mending the revenue by an eaſing of the old duty; but I ſuppoſe he would have laid on new taxes as well as other miniſters, if his predeceſſors had left him any thing new to tax.

All this did not ſuit any purpoſe; I wanted poſitive facts againſt the falling miniſters; inſtead of which I only found an aukward explaining away of all their virtues; ſo I got up, paid for my coffee, and left old Egu vocal to ſhuffle and cut upon their characters to thoſe who were better diſpoſed to hear him than myſelf at that time.

I next called at the top of the Hay-market; d——n me, ſays a Blood, with a cockade and a laced uniform, that looked to have ſeen more than one campaign, if I care who is in or who is out, ſo we have war and promotion. I don't underſtand much about their ſtamp-act, and their trade; but no man will ever perſuade me, that there is either juſtice or honour in giving up a point, that may be enforced by five regiments; and then where is your liberty if you can't make a parcel of raſcals pay when you pleaſe.—I was going to reply, but caſting an eye upon the length of his ſword, and fearing he might think I objected to his preferment, I ſtarted off and left him to patience and half-pay till the war ſhall be declared.

At the Grecian, in the temple, I found they had got the news of a removal, and we proceeded to try the delinquents in due courſe of law; when an unlucky attorney, happening to ſtart the queſtion of general warrants, immediately every other point was dropped; Saltſeld and Ventris were ſpoke of more than R——m or C——y; and when I wanted to hear of the laſt ſeſſion of p——t, they referred me to ſtatutes at large. This was a curious diſcuſſion; but as I had not time to hear counſel on both ſides, I thought it was beſt to put it off till next term; ſo I went out of court no wiſer than I came in.

At Lloyd's, in the city, I found them all buſy in filling up policies on the life of the great commoner. I whiſpered a friend of mine, a broker, 'if one could 'not get his popularity inſured alſo for a twelve'month certain.' He told me it would be a hard thing, and would run high, unleſs I offered it out and in, as they do Weſt Indiamen; but at any rate, if I would give twenty per cent. he would ſee and get it underwrote till next Lord-Mayor's ſhow: I tried ſeveral other ſubjects for inſurance, which I am not at liberty to declare, for fear of hurting the premium. I ſhall only mention, that I found in general the reputation of the preſent Miniſtry much eaſier to be inſured than their places. One nobleman, particularly, whoſe integrity I could have underwrote at an half per cent. they would not look on the policy for his office at 75 per cent. to recover only 53 in caſe of loſs. I ſhall only mention further, for the benefit of adventurers that way, that there is a certain lucrative office, that they may have inſured to the preſent poſſeſſors for a ſmall premium; for tho' he, in the language of underwriters, is thought not to have too ſound a bottom, yet as he is well rigged, and has a remarkable faculty of ſailing before the wind, he is what they call a good riſk.

I did not neglect to call at Jonathan's: immediately the whole tribe, Jews and Gentiles, flocked round me; I then modeſtly aſked a gentleman, who, by his noſe and his chin, ſeemed to be one of the choſen ſeed. What news, and if the new miniſtry was already ſettled? Pray, Sir, (ſays he) are you a bull or a bear? Not much verſant in 'change alley language, I thought he meant to affront me:—Neither, replies I) and you are an aſs for aſking. Upon which the whole gang burſt out a laughing; and the waiter came directly up, and, with a city politeneſs, aſked me what I wanted there, and told me, that I muſt either pay a ſix-pence or quit the company directly. I told him, I wanted nothing, and as to the alternative he propoſed, I was already determined, that I had no notion of paying a ſix-pence there, when I could have better company at the next ale-houſe, for the money.—So out I turn'd, and left them muttering Hebrew, or ſome ſuch language, that was Greek to me.

Thus, Mr. Printer, after a great deal of trouble, I found myſelf no wiſer than when I firſt ſet out, with the diſadvantage of being three diſhes of coffee and two pints of beer out of pocket by the bargain; beſides a dram at Covent Garden, which I do not reckon, as I had other buſineſs at the houſe.

Therefore, I truſt, ſome of your correſpondents will ſupply the public with abuſe againſt the miniſtry, till I can be able to pick up a little at a cheap rate. In the mean time, my opinion is, that their greateſt crime is being a whole year in office. I have read ſomewhere of a nation of wiſe ſavages, that knocked their fathers on the head, when they thought them old enough. We cannot do better than follow that example, in a political way: our Miniſters were guilty of youth when they came in; and now let us condemn them for old age, at the end of thirteen moons.

SOUTH-CAROLINA.

THE following is an extract from an act of Parliament, which I beg to lay before the public, paſſed in the 5*th* year of His preſent Majeſty's reign, (reciting a former act) for more effectually ſecuring and encouraging the Trade of His Majeſty's American dominions, as follows:

AND whereas the maſters of ſeveral ſhips or veſſels ſailing from the Britiſh American colonies or plantations, have cleared out from thence in ballaſt, without taking any goods on board there, purpoſely to evade giving bond, as directed by the before recited act made in the laſt ſeſſion of parliament, with conditions, that in caſe any Molaſſes or Syrups, being the produce of any of the plantations not under the dominion of His Majeſty, his heirs, or ſucceſſors, ſhall be laden on board ſuch ſhip or veſſel, the ſame ſhall be (the danger of the ſeas and enemies excepted) be brought, without fraud or wilful diminution, by the ſaid ſhip or veſſel, to ſome of His Majeſty's colonies or plantations in America, or to ſome port in Great-Britain, and the ſaid act may, by ſuch practices, be rendered ineffectual to anſwer the purpoſes thereby intended: for remedy whereof, be it further enacted, by the authority aforeſaid, That from and after the 10th day of October, One thouſand ſeven hundred and ſixty five, the ſaid bond, with the condition in the ſaid recited act mentioned, ſhall be given for every ſhip or veſſel that ſhall ſet ſail from any Britiſh colony or plantation in America, whether any goods ſhall be there laden on board any ſuch ſhip or veſſel, or not: And if any ſhip or veſſel, not having taken any goods on board as aforeſaid, ſhall ſet ſail or proceed from any Britiſh colony or plantation in America, before ſuch bond ſhall be given, ſuch ſhip or veſſel, with her furniture, ſhall be forfeited, and ſhall, and may be ſeized and proſecuted in the manner directed by the ſaid recited act of parliament; any thing therein contained to the contrary notwithſtanding.

AND whereas in and by the ſaid recited act made in the laſt ſeſſion of parliament, it is, amongſt other things, enacted, That a ſufferance and cocquet ſhall be taken from the officers of the Cuſtoms, for all goods, wares, and merchandize, of any kind whatſoever, which ſhall be laden on board any ſhip or veſſel in any Britiſh colony or plantation in America, to be carried from thence to any other colony or plantation, as in the ſaid act is expreſſed: And whereas the requiring ſuch ſufferances & cocquets for goods of the growth or produce of the ſaid colonies, which are not liable to any duty, by any act of parliament made in Great-Britain, nor prohibited to be carried from the ſaid colonies, may lay an unneceſſary reſtraint upon the Trade and Correſpondence of His Majeſty's American ſubjects, when ſuch goods are carried merely for the uſe and ſuſtenance of the ſaid colonies, in boats or ſmall veſſels without decks, which do not go to open ſeas: For the eaſe therefore of His Majeſty's American ſubjects in this particular, be it enacted, That from and after the 5*th* day of July, One thouſand ſeven hundred and ſixty-ſix, the ſaid recited act ſhall not extend, nor be conſtrued to extend, to require any perſon to take out any ſufferance or cocquet for any goods of the growth, product, or manufacture of the Britiſh colonies or plantations in America, which are not, by any act of parliament made in Great Britain, liable to any duty, either upon the importation into, or the exportation from, the ſaid colonies or plantations, nor are prohibited to be exported from thence, which ſhall be laden in any boat, ſloop, ſhallop or other veſſel without a deck, not exceeding twenty tons burthen, and ſhall be carried within any river, lake, or other inland waters, within the ſaid colonies or plantations, and ſhall not be carried out to ſea further than one league from the ſhore; any thing in the ſaid recited act to the contrary notwithſtanding.

AS this extract is obvious to the meaneſt capacity, I ſhall trouble myſelf very little with any comment upon it; but only obſerve, that thoſe two Revenue Laws are almoſt new, and enacted ſo very lately as in the 4*th* and 5*th* years of His preſent Majeſty's reign, and at a time when the late Collector, MR. BEAUFAIN, was entirely borne down by the weight of old age and infirmity: Therefore a nonuſer of theſe ſufferances, cannot, by any means, be claim'd as a cuſtomary privilege: And I am perſuaded, that no gentleman can ſay, with any degree of propriety, that he claims an uninterrupted and cuſtomary right againſt laws relative to the revenue, to which an obedience ought ever to be paid, as often as the parliament of Great Britain thinks is expedient to make any alteration; and beſides, theſe very acts preſent you with a new clauſe, not hitherto pointed out to you by any other act of parliament, made in any King's reign, the breach of which is, forfeiture of your goods and veſſel, and that generally to all ſhips and veſſels, without any exception whatſoever, other than to ſufferances taken out by coaſters under twenty tons burthen, and undecked. As I am bound, by the duty of my office, while I have the honour to hold it, to pay regard to all acts of Trade, I hope I ſhall be excuſed, in giving this public teſtimony, to all maſters of ſhips and other ſea veſſels, who are hereby deſired to take notice, at their peril, they receive on board any goods, wares or merchandizes whatſoever, until a ſufferance is firſt had and obtained (by the reſpective ſhippers) from the officers of His Majeſty's Cuſtom Houſe, agreeable to the orders and directions of the acts above-mentioned. And I do hereby require all coaſters, under whatever denomination above twenty tons, that for the ſecurity of their navigation, they do apply to the Cuſtom Houſe immediately, for their reſpective regiſters, agreeable to the acts of Trade; and that they do not depart the port, before ſuch veſſel have entered and clear'd according to law; that all rice-coaſters of twenty tons and under, (as alſo all deck'd veſſels) do take out permits for ſix months and give bonds, as have been uſual heretofore. And, as every honourable ſtep has been taken, to conciliate the differences ariſing upon the diſtinction of the word coaſter, that that privilege might only center with, and be enjoyed by the inhabitants of this province, and not by thoſe of another, which, I am informed, is practiſed too frequently under that denomination; but, as any propoſals coming from me, might not be of weight enough to facilitate ſo happy and eligible an event, ſo I truſt to the acts of Trade, to which all perſons are bound to pay obedience.

JULY 28, 1766.

Copy of a letter from the merchants of Canada, in anſwer to [a circular] one received from a committee of merchants in London.

GENTLEMEN,

BY the laſt mail from New-York we received your letter of the 18th of March laſt, informing us of the repeal of the ſtamp-act for which we thank you.

As it would not have been attended with any advantage either to yourſelves, or to the reſt of your fellow ſubjects, ſo it was not neceſſary to enumerate the difficulties which you have had to compoſe an affair in which you, Gentlemen, and the Americans in particular, and the Britiſh nation in general were greatly intereſted. Nevertheleſs, we think with you, that you are juſtly intitled, for the pains which you have taken for the common intereſt, to the privilege of giving your ſentiments with that freedom which is conſiſtent with our connection, as good friends, as fellow ſubjects, and as traders. In that character you have a right to utter your thoughts upon our paſt and future conduct in regard to matters which concern the whole community whereof you and we are members. But permit us, Gentlemen, to obſerve, that we are at a loſs to conceive what part of our conduct you allude to in that paſſage of your epiſtle wherein you tell us that, "we "muſt know better than to imagine that any well "regulated government will ſuffer laws, enacted "with a view to public good, to be diſputed by law-leſs rioters with impunity." If your alluſion is to the ſeveral remonſtrances made by ſome other parts of America, for the repeal of an act which was a public grievance, you are miſtaken in the application: And we wonder very much how you could be ignorant of the ſubmiſſion with which that oppreſſive act was received in this military government. As we were not leſs ſenſible than our neighbours of the ill conſequences which would have attended the execution of that act, neither ſhould we have been wanting in our duty to ourſelves and to our fellow ſubjects by a ſilence on that head, had we been under the ſame advantages of government. For it is our unanimous opinion, that no meaſure could be worſe concerted, nor more full of fatal effects than that very act; which appears to us to have been propoſed by the enemies both of the colonies and of the mother country; for as there is a natural and reciprocally convenient connection between the mother and her daughters, whatever affects the one muſt neceſſarily prejudice the other: So, tho' we did acquieſce we muſt candidly acknowledge that it was more neceſſity, & not our inclination, which induced us to a compliance; and therefore we are not intitled to any merit on that ſcore.

We will readily allow, that there is no government ſo perfect but what may ſome time or other eſtabliſh laws which are novice. But give us leave to aſk Gentlemen, if the laws ſo enacted ſhould be owing either to miſinformation, to miſtakes, or to the frailties of the human mind, whether the oppoſers of ſuch errors in the conduct of the moſt important affairs of the ſtate, deſerve the reproachable and diſgraceful appellation of lawleſs rioters?

As it is not juſt, neither ſhould it be tolerated, "that without proof of inconvenience, tumultuous "force ſhall be encouraged by a part to fly in the "face of power eſtabliſhed for the good of the "whole." But, we confeſs our ignorance of what we ſtand accuſ'd of by this paſſage; and as we know of no ſort of reaſon for ſuch a public accuſation, we beg, Gentlemen, that you will point out in what manner and when, "a part of us hath encouraged a "tumultuous force to fly in the face of power," that when we are made ſenſible of our offence we may know how to make ſuitable reparation. 'Till then we cannot think of "exerting our endeavours "to cancel the remembrance of flagrant breaches of "public order;" be aſſured we do not know of their ever having had any exiſtence here.

As we have the warmeſt attachment to the mother country, which nature poſſibly admit of, you may be aſſured, Gentlemen, ſuch a conduct and gratitude will ever be conſpicuous in our conduct; both from a natural and convenient connection; but not in particular on the account of the repeal of the ſtamp-act which we look upon as highly neceſſary for the intereſt of the nation; and therefore, we conſider it as an act of neceſſity, not of grace, as you ſeem to ſuggeſt by your calling it an "inconteſtible "proof of the moderation of the mother country." However, tho' we ſee it in that point of light, we ſhall nevertheleſs entertain ſentiments the moſt favourable upon the occaſion; and conduct ourſelves in ſuch a manner exactly as become good ſubjects, ſtudious of our own welfare, the good of our country, and the happineſs of mankind.

We are ſenſible that, under providence, we are indebted for this happy event to the juſtneſs of the grievance, and to the regard of his Majeſty for the happineſs of his ſubjects, which we ſhall never doubt of: And could we breathe a wiſh here, it ſhould be that the nation may be as certain of the attention of his miniſters, to whom the bad conſequences of the ill-judged ſtamp-act may ſerve as a leſſon.

As you are pleaſed to ſay that, "if the Americans had acquieſced with the law and cuſtom re"preſented the hardſhips as they aroſe, the relief "would have been more ſpeedy; and that you "ſhould have avoided many difficulties, as well as "not a few UNANSWERABLE mortifying re"proaches on our account." Permit us, in our turn, to remark that we differ in opinion with you ſo much, as to think the contrary would have happened; and that if the moſt ſpirited oppoſition had not been made, the act would never have been repealed. In which caſe, tho' you might have avoided the difficulties & reproaches you ſpeak of, it would have been attended with more diſagreeable conſequences to yourſelves & the reſt of the nation. This reſiſtance to meaſures deſtructive to a commercial and manufacturing people, will be a leſſon to us and our poſterity. And, animated by this example, by the moſt juſt and conſtitutional motives, by the patronage of the beſt of princes, and by the attention of the Britiſh legiſlature to the common welfare, we ſhall, as they ob-

...nest, moſt deſtitute enumerate our grievances and ...e to experience the truth of what you have ad...vanced, "that if by any means laws are or ſhould ...be enacted, detrimental or ſtrikingly oppreſſive ...to any part of the Britiſh ſubjects, the Britiſh le...giſlature will at all times with the utmoſt tender...neſs conſider every grievance, and redreſs them ...at the moment they are known." In the interim give us leave, gentlemen, to obſerve that, we think it pity, as well on the account of public tranquility, as of public advantage, that matters which ſo eſſentially concern the happineſs of a commercial people, are not conſidered with greater attention by thoſe who are truly qualified to judge of them. Which, in our humble opinion, would prevent thoſe many and diſagreeable conſequences which happen from an haſty&ſlow determination upon that important point.

Nothing on our parts ſhall be wanting to impreſs the minds of our fellow-ſubjects with the moſt dutiful attachment to our moſt gracious Sovereign, a full ſubmiſſion to the laws, and, of conſequence, a due reſpect for the legiſlature; from a thorough conviction that whilſt we thereby promote the tranquility and felicity of that community whereof we have the honour to be members, we ſhall advance our own. As this is not leſs our inclination than our duty, we could wiſh that nothing prevented our compoſing ſo deſirable a tract. But, however meaſures may appear to you to have been taken, with a view to the public good, there are ſome of a different ſtamp and tendency. At leaſt it appears to us to us from what has lately been publiſhed here about raiſing exorbitant duties in a manner the moſt unſuitable to the commerce of Canada; and of ſuch a nature that if the ſcheme for raiſing thoſe duties ſhould be put into execution, we are unanimouſly of opinion that ſuch a meaſure will entirely ruin our trade, and oblige us to quit this country. The conſequence of which you are better able to conceive than we can deſcribe in the compaſs of a letter. And as theſe and other inconveniences have been pointed out in the public papers, we beg leave to refer you to them; and to obſerve farther that it happens quite mal a propos to overburthen and diſtreſs one part of America ſo very ſoon after the complaints made and the ill conſequences which have attended a conduct of the ſame nature in another part.

The repeal of the ſtamp-act is of public ſervice, by which all ſhare in the advantage ariſing from the event: And therefore both on that account, and on the account of the grievances we ourſelves complain of, we ſee no room for ſuch a profuſion of encomiums as your letter is full of in regard to clemency, public ſpirit, abilities, firmneſs of the adminiſtration, humanity, prudence, patriotiſm of the generality of thoſe who compoſe the legiſlature, and magnanimity: And at a time too, "that the Britiſh legiſlature "was provoked by the moſt irritating meaſures from "the conduct of many on our ſide the water." A conduct which we proteſt againſt as we are innocent of the accuſation; as well as ignorant of the tendancy of your letter, which appears to be written more in a miniſterial ſtile, than in that of a friend and merchant. But tho' we cannot well account for your modes of diction, we will, with all the tenderneſs of friendſhip, ſuppoſe your meaning to be Good, tho' the expreſſion be very refined, and therefore, both from inclination and gratitude we ſhall profeſs ourſelves, Gentlemen,

Your moſt obedient and oblig'd ſervants,
Pot a number of the merchants in Canada.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.

THE damage which this capital has ſuſtained by the late earthquakes is much greater than was at firſt imagined. Several towns on the gulph of Nicomedia, have likewiſe been deſtroyed.

Naples, July 5. The eruption of Mount Veſuvius is not yet ceaſed, though for ſome time paſt it has done no damage.

Genoa, July 7. We hear from Corſica, that the French miniſtry had written a letter to General Paoli, which occaſioned his calling together the principal officers of his party. Neither the ſubject of the letter, nor the reſolutions that were taken in conſequence are yet known; but it is ſaid, that if Paoli and his adherents ſhould reject the propoſals that are made to them, there will ſoon be a great revolution in the affairs of Corſica.

[London Gazette.]

LONDON, JULY 31.

The Earl of Dartmouth, who was firſt Lord of Trade, and intended to have been ſecretary of ſtate for the colonies, has reſigned.

George Onſlow and Thomas Townſhend, Eſqrs; are to remain at the board of treaſury.

It is ſaid that the pay-office will be divided between two, and that Mr. Dowdeſwell will be one of the perſons appointed.

By Mr. Pitt's being created Earl of Chatham, his ſeat in the houſe of commons becomes vacant for the city of Bath; but Mr. De Grey, who is Member for Newport, in Cornwall, needs not be re-elected, on his being promoted to the office of attorney-general.

AUGUST 2.

We hear Baron Bothmar, miniſter for Denmark, will accompany her Royal Highneſs Princeſs Caroline-Matilda, on her voyage to Copenhagen, having been appointed by his court vice chamberlain to her intended Majeſty; and that another miniſter from Denmark is ſoon expected here.

Yeſterday the Earl of Shelburne had a numerous levee at his houſe in Hill-ſtreet, for the firſt time ſince his being appointed ſecretary of ſtate.

Yeſterday the hon. Charles Yorke, Eſq; was at court, and, it's ſaid, reſigned his place of his Majeſty's attorney-general.

The lord chancellor has appointed Henry Wilmot, Eſq; to be his principal ſecretary, which place he enjoyed under the Earl of Northington.

In conſequence of ſome late diſpatches to the courts of Vienna and Berlin, it is daily expected that an anſwer will arrive from thoſe two courts on an affair of the greateſt importance to the future peace and tranquility of Europe.

It is ſaid, that the late great commoner has declared, that as the whole of his conduct had been for the ſervice of his country, he could not cloſe the ſcene of his actions with more propriety, than accepting of a peerage, which he hoped would be the means of quieting the people; for if he had continued in the houſe of commons, they would have been in continual expectation of his ſerving them, which now they never will think of.

It is ſaid the Earl of —— has got for his daughter, a reverſion of the Hanaper, at preſent poſſeſſed by the Duke of Chandois.

It is ſaid that three attempts have been made to obtain an addreſs from this city, on occaſion of ſome late changes, but without effect.

It is ſaid Lord Viſcount Pynſent will be elected Member of Parliament for the city of Bath, in the room of his father now Earl of Chatham, from the great regard that antient corporation bears to the virtues and ſteadineſs of that able miniſter.

It is ſaid that a treaty of marriage will ſoon take place between Lord Viſcount Pynſent, and the third daughter of John Earl of Bute.

Tueſday morning, at ſix o'clock, the Earl of Bute ſet out from his houſe in town, for his ſeat in Bedfordſhire.

It is ſaid, that Charles Dingley, Eſq; will be appointed one of the Commiſſioners of the Cuſtoms.

By letters from Berlin, we learn, that upon Prince Ferdinand's quitting the Pruſſian ſervice, General Beckwith begged leave to reſign; and we can aſſure the public, that that gentleman does not mean to enter into the French ſervice, any more than his great and revered General Prince Ferdinand.

Though the expectation of the public is foregone; yet we are aſſured, that a plan has been concerted, by which the E. of C. will become as popular as the late W. P.

We are informed that the right hon. the Earl of Hertford is to continue in his poſt of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

We hear that the right hon. Lord Percival, eldeſt ſon to the Earl of Egmont, will be made a Commiſſioner of Trade.

We hear the youngeſt daughter of the Earl of Bute, will accompany her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs Caroline-Matilda to Copenhagen.

The Royal Yatcht, we are told, are not ordered for the purpoſe of carrying over the Princeſs Matilda to Denmark, but that of fetching the Stadtholder hither.

ANDREW MAXE,

CHARLES-TOWN, September 29. 1766.

BY the last accounts from New-York, we are informed, that Sir Henry Moore's proclamation thro' the interior parts of that government, has been undertaken with a view to appease the tumults that lately arose in some of the upper counties, where a military force is employed to dispossess some settlers who have seated themselves on lands claimed by Messrs. Livingston and Ratsdier of New York; and to have an interview of importance with Sir William Johnson, superintendent, &c. in the Mohawks country, and that he had proceeded on his tour as far as Crown-Point.

The snuff ran so high at St Christopher's the 14th of August, (the day the late hurricane happened at Martinique) that no business could be done there that and the next day; nor could the Grenville packet, Capt. Siddall, land her mails 'till the 15th; and upwards of 20 vessels were obliged to put to sea, but received no damage. Part of the gale was felt at Antigua; and several wrecks were seen between the Grenades and that island.

The general assembly of New York, it is said, have made compensation to Major James, for the damage he sustained by the riots in that city. And some towns in New-England have instructed their representatives, to endeavour that compensation be made to the sufferers in that government; while others have added a condition, "if it shall appear to "them to be reasonable."

Lord Hope has proceeded on his tour of America, from this thro' all the northern governments, as far as Boston, and was expected the middle of this month at Rhode-Island.

Last Monday died at Beaufort, much lamented, Mr. Francis Stuart, merchant there, and brother to the superintendent of Indian affairs, for the Southern department of America.

Capt. Peabody from Rhode Island, the 17th inst. in latitude 38, 36, N. Long. 71, 39. W. saw a dismasted vessel, which he supposed to be a brigantine, standing N. N. W. wind at E. He bore away to speak with her, but she kept her course, made no signal, and a squal came on, which prevented him.—The 19th, in latitude 35. 40. N. Long. 73 W. spoke with a ship from London for Philadelphia, Captain Alexander master.

UPON

PREACH'D

By J. J. ZUBLY, V. D. M.

Brethren, ye have been called unto Liberty; only use not Liberty as an occasion to the Flesh.

But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.

TEXT. ZECHARIAH viii. 10, 11, 12.

For before these days there was no hire for man, nor any hire for beast; neither was there any peace to him that went out, or came in, because of the affliction: for I set all men every one against his neighbour. But now I will not be unto the residue of this people as in the former days, saith the LORD of hosts. For the seed shall be prosperous: the vine shall give her fruit, and the ground shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give their dew: and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things.

☞ In this discourse, this new World is considered as under Divine Theocracy. And the justness of the author's comparisons of present with past events, with the elegance of thought, design and expression, render it worthy to be transmitted to Posterity.
